“I SURVIVED COMMUNISM – ARE YOU READY FOR YOUR TURN?”

By SPENCER FERNANDO

Do I have your attention? Then let me describe to you how communist propaganda and methodology work. There are 3 main stages:

1. Polarization (KGB term: “demoralization”)
2. Destabilization
3. Revolution

Stage 1: Polarization – Divide and Conquer

In order to win power, communists first polarize their target society. The notion of injustice is introduced. One group of people – poor workers – are made to feel victimized by a second group, to the point that they demand civil discourse. Who are these people that supposedly victimize poor workers? Here’s a clue:

“Communists don’t care about poor people, they just hate rich ones” – George Orwell

The one thing a communist cannot abide is a wealthy person. For communists, the rich are owners of private businesses, especially successful ones. They are loathed and demonized as heartless, spiteful monsters who exploit their employees and don’t care about their welfare. The rich are public enemy #1 – they don’t care about people or the environment; they care only about profit and wealth. Dare to disagree? Then you are a “denier” and “imperialist traitor”, and after completion of stage 3, you will be physically liquidated.

“We must hate. Hatred is the basis of communism. Children must be taught to hate their parents if they are not communists.” – Vladimir Ilyich Lenin

During the first stage, communists focus on altruistic people – people with big hearts, full of good intentions, who believe in doing good, for goodness’ sake. Why? Because idealistic people are usually naïve and easy to manipulate, especially via their emotions. Recognizing how essential these people are to the success of his revolution, Lenin referred to them as “useful idiots”.

Stage 2: Destabilization

During the second stage the basic values of society are targeted for change. This always starts with education:

“Give me your child for eight years, and [he or she] will be a communist forever” – Vladimir Ilyich Lenin

Communism always uses teachers and the education system to impose its ideology and promote its values – through indoctrination. My own indoctrination started in elementary school. In grade four, we all had to become Young Pioneers. From that day, we were taught about the ‘imminent danger’ posed by capitalistic countries. The curriculum in school gradually but firmly established admiration for communism and loyalty to the communist party. We were constantly reminded of how we live in the “best political system in the world”, the “country with the best social justice and equality”.

Our teachers participated in this process, either voluntarily or involuntarily. I remember teachers who actively reinforced communist indoctrination in schools. They exploited a child’s emotional immaturity, lack of experience and knowledge – vulnerability – to impose their communist ideas, beliefs and values. They took advantage of their position of authority, of the natural trust that children place in teachers, to brainwash a young and vulnerable generation – to train the next generation of communists. Scare-mongering was a favorite tactic: “Embrace communism! Fear capitalism! Otherwise, your country will be overtaken by imperialists and you will be exploited! ... Who is not with us is against us!”

If you think this can't happen in Canada, then I have news for you: it's been happening for some time, in both Canada and the US. The environmental cause was targeted years ago by communists as a catalyst for promoting socialism and paving the way for communism.

New communism is based on all the old communist ideological principles and beliefs, but uses environmentalism as its agent of change, to completely alter the core values of western democracy and destabilize (demoralize) society.

As illustrated by the following excerpt from Captain Eco, written by Jonathon Porritt-Ellis Nadler and published in 1991, children are being indoctrinated in our schools, being made to believe that it's their responsibility to 'save the planet':

“Your planet is in serious trouble – from pollution, toxic waste and the loss of forest, farmland and fresh water... Your parents and grandparents have made a mess of looking after the earth. They may deny it, but they are little more than thieves. And they are stealing your future from under your noses.”

Some more examples:

- In May 2012, a grade-3 class took to the streets of Toronto with signs, to protest the construction of the Northern Gateway pipeline. The protest was organized by their teacher and a local community volunteer. Pure Marxist method. Just like these kids, who marched in protest to “save the planet”, we too were made by our teachers to march with banners and signs to save our country from imperialists.

- In 2011, in Laval, Quebec, a six-year-old boy was disqualified from a teddy-bear contest because a Ziploc was found in his lunch instead of a reusable container. How did this boy feel, after being ostracized and excluded from his peers? Maybe he felt punished for his parents' action. What's the next step? Encourage children to report their own parents, who use Ziplocs instead of reusable containers – denunciation is common practice during communism.

- In April 2018, an Edmonton father went to an elementary school to see his grade-4 daughter's play. In the play, the children sabotaged a factory, in the name of climate-change, then went on to save Alberta from its “evil oil industry” and “greedy oil barons”. Textbook communist methodology – demonizing the private sector (oil industry) by representing them as “greedy oil barons”.

In some university lecture halls, professors are also trying to indoctrinate the new upcoming proletariat. Every time I see elite university students protesting capitalism and advocating socialism, I wonder if they realize that if they succeed, it will be their very last protest. In an interview recorded in 1984, KGB defector Yuri Bezmenov described the consequences of ideological subversion (indoctrination). Here is a short excerpt:

“A person who is demoralized (indoctrinated) is unable to assess true information, the facts tell nothing to him....even if I shower him with information, with authentic proof, with documents, with pictures ... even if I take him, by force, to the Soviet Union and show him a concentration camp, he will refuse to believe it ... until he will receive a kick in his fat bottom.”

(Yuri Bezmenov – on “Useful Idiots” and the True Face of Communism)

The children currently attending our elementary schools will vote in 10-12 years. How many of these children are being (or have already been) brainwashed into believing that in order to “save the planet”, they must vote for a government that will stop “destroying the planet”, by eliminating private ownership and taking control of production?

“The philosophy of the classroom in one generation will be the philosophy of government in the next”

Abraham Lincoln

If you believe warm, cuddly socialism leads to utopian communism, in which equality and social justice prevail, then allow me to impart some insights about the ‘social justice’ delivered to us by communists. You deserve to know a little about the substance in which you will have to swim, before you dive into the cesspool called communism.

Stage 3: Revolution

After gaining the support of a majority, communists call for a democratic election. If they win it, they seize power and abolish democratic elections altogether. At this point, members of opposition parties, along with all other opponents deemed to be a potential threat, are ‘physically liquidated’. (In case you aren’t familiar with this quaint communist phrase, it means executed). Private businesses are immediately seized and confiscated – nationalized. Key supporters who now finally realize how they have been manipulated and exploited (i.e. useful idiots who are no longer useful) are either jailed or executed, to prevent the formation of any dissident movements. All other useful idiots, having fulfilled their purpose of bringing communists to power, are now either enslaved into the new ideology, or disposed of in a variety of prescribed ways. A new privileged elite of communist party leaders is now formed. (No hypocrisy here! After all those angry claims of exploitation by a privileged elite, what’s the first thing communists do once they gain power?) Leaders of every key institution or organization: company, hospital, police, school, etc. are now replaced by an official member of the communist party. Competence, ability or fitness for the job is no longer relevant or required; the only prerequisite is loyalty to the party.

GUNTER: IT LOOKS LIKE ANTI-DEMOCRATIC BILL C-10 WILL BE FORCED UPON US

By Lorne Gunter, Toronto Sun

Not since 2000 – 21 years ago – when the Chretien Liberals were forcing through amendments to the Canada Elections Act, has a government used “time allocation” to end debate on a bill at the committee stage.

But Monday, with the backing of the Bloc Quebecois, the Trudeau Liberals told the House of Commons Heritage Committee to stop picking apart Bill C-10, the government’s Internet censorship legislation, and send it back to the Commons to be passed before summer – and a likely election.

One of the most anti-democratic federal bills in a generation is now to be forced through using one of Parliament’s most anti-democratic rules thanks to a cozy arrangement between the Trudeau Liberals and the Separatists.

When it passes, Canada’s broadcast regulator – the CRTC – will be handed the regulatory equivalent of a blank cheque to monitor and regulate personal social media posts, podcasts, political commentary, sports streaming and news sites.

Why do I say a blank cheque? Because the law does not outline in much detail what the CRTC may poke its nose into or how it deals with violators.

The Liberals have budgeted nearly $4 million this year just for the CRTC to hire consultants and start staff working on a proposal for how much more money and staff the commission will need to monitor the Internet activities of all Canadians.

Back in March, CRTC Chairperson Ian Scott told the Heritage committee that if C-10 passed, his commission intended to “regulate all programming” on every device and platform. That’s going to take a mighty large bureaucracy and an equally large budget.

The rush to force through C-10 is being done, in part, to ensure Canadian content comes up first on Canadians’ computers and smartphones. The CRTC will have the power to force Internet providers to direct your searches to Canadian sites first, and to Canadian music, movies and television.

The government also claims C-10 is about insuring Big Tech such as Netflix, Prime, Google and others pay more taxes to fund Canadian arts.

But throughout the heated debate over C-10, Steven Guilbeault, the Heritage Minister, has always been emphatic, too, that the new law is needed to stop “hatred” and “misinformation.”

That sounds nice. Who’s in favour of racism and misinformation?

But who gets to decide what is racist or misinformation?

Consider the lab-leak theory – the scientific hypothesis that COVID originated in a lab in China instead of first infecting humans when it jumped from a bat or other animal purchased at a wet market in Wuhan.

For months, “experts” scoffed at the idea that the pandemic began with an accident at a high-level, Chinese-government laboratory. They insisted that was “extremely unlikely,” a “conspiracy theory” – even “racist.”

The lab-leak theory was considered dangerous misinformation that was driving anti-Asian prejudice and making it harder to win broad compliance with public health measures.

Now more and more researchers see the lab theory as the most-likely explanation.

For one thing, no bat or other animal has been located with the virus despite 18 months of frenzied searching by Chinese authorities. (The virus cannot have jumped from animals to humans if animals have never had it.)

And, second, COVID has exactly the code one would expect if researchers had been playing around trying to increase the contagiousness and deadliness of the virus.

What has any of that got to do with C-10?

Imagine a group of Liberal appointees empowered to keep “misinformation” about the virus off the Internet until the public health emergency is over. What do you think the chances are of your or anyone else’s posts on a lab leak would have been allowed online?

Now that Bill C-10 cannot be stopped, remember who forced it on Canada at election time.

ABSP INTERIM BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Appointment of New Directors

Colleen Campbell of Red Deer was appointed as a director of the Interim Board of Directors. Colleen is known for her great salesmanship abilities.

Danny Heighton was appointed as a director of the Interim Board of Directors. Danny is focused on registration petition to make ABSP an official provincial party.

Constitution Committee

The Constitution Committee continues to work on drafting an outline state constitution, using the US Constitution as the minimum standard. The end result will be an outline constitution, listing options available for party members to vote and select at a convention in the future. This draft constitution would be gone over by both Canadian and American constitutional lawyers to be presented to Albertans in a referendum for approval, or back to the grindstone to amend.

The final, Albertan citizen approved would then be presented to all US state governors, Congress and the US Executive, once a referendum to secede Canada and seeking statehood in the USA has been approved by the people.

Alberta Health Care Code

An Alberta Health Care Code will be stated within our state constitution. All health benefits that exist as a province will be preserved. However, expansion of private facilities and administration will be explored. Any options that are developed will be approved and adopted in the draft state constitution for final approval by Albertans.
